

Supplementary material has been published as submitted. It has not been copyedited, typeset or checked for scientific content by Acta Dermato-Venereologica

Fig. S1. Sanger sequencing of the affected skin reveals a known heterozygous substitution c.68G>A, p.Gly23Glu in exon 1 of ATP2A2. The signals of the mutated allele in the unaffected skin and blood are not visible.

