Comments by the authors:

In this first multicentric retrospective study a large cohort of primary cutaneous B-cell lymphomas (PCBCL) patients from the University of Turin (Italy) and the University Hospital La Fe in Valencia (Spain) was gathered to assess overall occurrence of other malignancies. A remarkable incidence of metachronous non-lymphoma skin cancers (in order: basal cell carcinoma, melanoma, squamous cell carcinoma) were found in this population, pointing out to an association that all dermatologists should keep in mind when following up PCBCL patients and underlining the need of prospective studies regarding cancer risk incidence in PCBCL patients.
